QUICK SHEET · CONSTITUTION OF THE FEDERATED REPUBLIC

Elections Infrastructure & the NVS

The machinery beneath the vote. Two independent panels no single authority can capture, a voting system engineered to be secret and auditable and resilient at the same time, credentials that hold no names — and, for a State that won't meet the standard, a federal takeover that lasts exactly one electoral period.

Article XI · §11.1, §11.2, §11.3

TWO INDEPENDENT PANELS — §11.1

Elections Panel

Builds and runs the National Voting System, sets federal election standards, certifies equipment, audits State compliance, administers referenda and confirmation votes, and certifies every federal result. Independent of both executives, the Legislature, and the other panel.

NRS Panel

Operates the National Record System — the Republic's permanent, tamper-evident public record. Independent in the same way. Both panels take temporary emergency technical measures only, expiring after 72 hours unless renewed on a fresh published determination — and never changing rules, timelines, or record permanence.

THE THREE PROPERTIES THE NVS MUST HOLD AT ONCE — §11.2

Ballot Secrecy

Technically impossible to link any vote to any voter — even in post-election audits.

Public Auditability

Aggregate results verifiable by anyone with NRS access; each voter can verify their own vote without revealing it.

Resilience

Keeps working in degraded conditions without sacrificing secrecy or auditability.

THE CREDENTIAL, AND WHAT CANNOT LEAVE THE SYSTEM — §11.2

Eligibility Without Identity

Eligibility verification may not store or expose voter identity within the NVS. The Constitution fixes the outcome; the technology that achieves it is left to statute and the Elections Panel.

The Data Firewall

No NVS information — including who participated — may go to any government body or foreign entity for any purpose but running that election. No State may add intermediaries or burdens that quietly reduce NVS access.

WHEN A STATE WON'T COMPLY — §11.3

FINDING

Audit & Publish

The Panel finds material failure, publishes it to the NRS, and formally notifies the State.

→

CURE

Statutory Window

The State gets a defined period to fix the identified failures.

→

TAKEOVER

One Electoral Period Only

No cure? The Panel runs that federal election directly in the State for that electoral period, and it may withhold result certification for affected districts if non-compliance was certified beforehand — then State administration resumes automatically. Votes already cast stay valid; the State may challenge the finding at the SC.

NUMBERS WORTH REMEMBERING

5 — member floor for each panel — the Legislature may never reduce either below it (§11.1).

1 — appointing authority may never hold a majority of a panel within one electoral term.

72 — hours — emergency technical measures expire; renewal needs a fresh published determination; rules never change.

180 — days — max term for an Acting member if a panel drops below floor. The Panel's own members designate first; the CC designates only if they can't, and CC-designated members may never form a majority.

A theoretical constitutional design project — not the law of any existing nation.
